

Onigiro® is a project born from the desire to promote minor destinations and itineraries characteristic of a Japan still little known, encouraging tourism to local realities that represent the true soul of the country.

Onigiro, a Japanese rice ball that dreams of becoming the superhero of this enterprise, is the mascot of the site that accompanies its readers through the regions of Japan to discover festivals, traditions, culture and typical activities in different seasons.

Founded in 2020 by the author of the editorial project "Four Seasons in Japan", the site wants to offer original guides and itineraries to help every fan of this country to plan their trip making it unique and unforgettable, providing useful information in a simple and "pocket", just like a delicious onigiri.

By the glints of the river along which Kyōto sits, thoughts turn to the importance of ourselves. I listen to the water gurgle past and feel peace that I never feel on the other side of the world. Stripped of the superfluous, for the first time I lack nothing: here, in simplicity, I finally have all I need to feel alive. To be myself at last

There are places where we feel we belong, where we can find ourselves and listen to our hearts.

When Valentina stumbles upon a difficult moment in her life, it is Japan that gives her that place in the long-sought world.

The journey in the seasons of the Rising Sun thus becomes the journey of every reader eager to get lost among the wonders of a country still hidden in many of its deepest aspects.

An adventure in the places discovered outside the beaten path, where the relationship between a unique culture and the surrounding nature becomes powerful and evocative. Where the same alternation of the seasons is an opportunity for beauty, a starting point for reflections on happiness and how to conquer it.

This novel guide, full of useful travel information, insights and itineraries, will lead you through an unexpected Japan, its traditions and its most hidden corners.

A path of places and life in which, step by step, you learn to understand the importance of the wonder inherent in what surrounds us, in small things, in the courage to grasp their existence and make it the most incredible journey ever.
